PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE TENTH CIRCUIT

Petitioner the State of New Mexico on behalf of the Regents of the University of New Mexico respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit entered in this proceeding on June 13, 1975.

OPINION BELOW

The decision below is reported at 517 F.2d 989 (10th Cir. 1975) and is appended hereto as Appendix A.

JURISDICTION

The decision below was entered on June 13, 1975 and a rehearing was denied on July 16, 1975. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(a)(1).

QUESTION PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Whether public employers under contracts with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for social security coverage of their employees must make contributions in lieu of taxes with respect to "wages" as defined in 26 U.S.C. § 3121 and rulings of the Treasury Department issued thereunder, or as defined in 42 U.S.C. § 409 and rulings of the Respondent issued thereunder.

STATUTES INVOLVED

This case involves the following statutes, the material provisions of which are set out in Appendix B hereto: 26 U.S.C. § 3101, § 3111(a), § 3121(a)(2) and (b)(7)(1970 ed. Vol. 6, pp. 6880 et seq.); 42 U.S.C. § 409(b), § 410(a)(7), § 418(a)(1), (a)(2), (e) and (i) (1970 ed. Vol. 9, pp. 9777 et seq.); § 5-7-2(a), and § 5-7-3(a)(1), (2), New Mexico Statutes Annotated (1953 Comp., Repl. Vol. 2, Pt. 1, pp. 300 et seq.). The Internal Revenue Code provisions are shown in the form applicable for 1968; subsequent amendments are irrelevant to the issue involved.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The State of New Mexico and Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare made an agreement pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 418 providing for coverage of certain employees of the State under the Social Security Act. During the year 1968, Mr. Galloway, an employee of the University of New Mexico covered by the contract, was absent from work because of illness. Under the University sick leave plan, he received $324.97 as sick leave payments. The University did not make a Social Security contribution with respect to these payments, and the Social Security Administration, Respondent's delegate, assessed $28.60 with respect thereto. After exhausting its administrative remedies, the State sued on behalf of its subdivision, The Regents of the University of New Mexico, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 418(t) for a redetermination of the correctness of the assessment in the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico. The trial court granted summary judgment for the Secretary and on appeal, the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit affirmed.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

The Decision Below Failed to Apply the Clear Words of the Governing Statutes and in so Doing, puts in Doubt the Validity of Contracts for Social Security Coverage of Public Employees in New Mexico and Other States

This Petition presents an important question in the administration of the social security system for public employers and employees involving a conflict between administrative interpretations of the applicable statutes by the Social Security Administration on the one hand and the Internal Revenue Service on the other. The precise question is whether public employers in general, and the University of New Mexico in particular, must make Social Security contributions with respect to "wages" as defined by 26 U.S.C. § 3121 and the rulings of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue thereunder, or, as the Court below held, with respect to "wages" as defined by 42 U.S.C. § 409 and the contrary ruling of the Social Security Administration. Although the statutory definitions are for all relevant purposes identical, the administrative rulings are in direct conflict. Both statutes provide that remuneration "on account of sickness or accident disability" is excluded from "wages." Under 26 U.S.C. § 3121, the Commissioner has issued Rev. Rul. 65-275, 1965-2 C.B. 385, excluding from "wages" all sick leave payments made pursuant to a general plan or system. There is no dispute that, if § 3121 and the Commissioner's ruling govern, the payments in question are excludable and the decision must be reversed (App. A herein p. 5a). However, under 42 U.S.C. § 409, the Administrator issued SSR 72-56 requiring for the sick pay exemption not only a general plan or system but also, among other non-statutory requirements, a showing that the plan calls for an employee to be paid "solely on account of sickness" rather than for an employee to "receive his regular salary despite sickness." Under this narrower administrative definition of the sick pay exclusion from "wages", the Administrator included the University's payments to Mr. Galloway in "wages." Therefore, the case turns on whether § 3121 or § 409 applies.

Petitioners contend that in straight-forward words the relevant statutes state that the definition in § 3121 applies. Whatever distinction the Secretary may make between payments "on account of sickness" and wages continued "despite sickness" is irrelevant to this case because the statutes give him no authority to issue rulings increasing or decreasing the contributions required of public employers, and because the definition of "wages" in § 409 does not measure the State's obligation for contributions.

Under 42 U.S.C. § 418(e)(1)(A), agreements between the State and the Secretary * must provide that the State shall "pay the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time or times as the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare may by regulation prescribe, amounts equivalent to the sum of the taxes which would be imposed [under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act], if the services of the employees covered by the agreement constituted employment as defined in [the FICA chapter of the Internal Revenue Code]." "Employment" is so defined in § 3121(b); "wages" from employment are defined in § 3121(a); and "the sum of the taxes which would be imposed" under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act are those imposed by § 3101 and § 3111. The amount of these taxes is calculated with reference to "wages" as defined in § 3121. Because the amounts payable under § 418(e)(1)(A) agreements are determined with reference to "employment" as defined in § 3121(b), and, therefore, "wages" as defined in § 3121(a), the authority of the Respondent, or the Social Security Administrator as his delegate, to issue regulations regarding contributions payable under such agreements is limited by § 418(e)(1)(B) to "payments and reports." Any definition of "wages" in § 409(b) is not relevant to the computation of the amount due. Authority to issue regulations or rulings regarding determination of the amount of contributions required is clearly reposed in the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. That conclusion is confirmed by 42 U.S.C. § 418(i), which directs the Respondent to "make the requirements imposed upon the states . . . the same, so far as practicable as those imposed upon private employers."

The courts below correctly read the language of § 418(i) to imply that the "requirements" imposed upon the states need not be identical with those imposed upon private employers, but they lost sight of the mandate of § 418(e)(1)(A) that public employers' contributions must be "equivalent" to the taxes imposed upon private employers. The courts below thus incorrectly concluded that § 418(i) necessarily implied authority to issue the ruling here involved, which determines the amount of the contributions due from public employers in respect of sick pay in a manner diametrically opposed to the rulings of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue applicable to private employers. The explicit provisions of § 418(e)(1)(B) limit the Secretary's authority to issuance of regulations relating to time for payments and required reports, and under § 418(i) he must conform those limited requirements "so far as practicable" to the requirements imposed upon private employers by the Internal Revenue Service. The Secretary obviously has no statutory authority to increase the contributions of public employers above those imposed on private employers. Because defendant's ruling on sick pay by public employers materially increases such contributions above amounts "equivalent" to the amounts due from similarly situated private employers the ruling exceeded defendant's authority and is void.

The court below incorrectly viewed the issue as whether the Secretary was entitled to interpret § 409-

(b) in such a way that the payments to Mr. Galloway were not excludable from "wages." (App. A herein p. 2a.) In fact, § 409(b) is not relevant in determining the University's contributions under the agreements authorized by § 418(e)(1)(A). Section 409 defines "wages" only for the purposes of determining social security benefits. The definition of I.R.C. § 3121 governs the required level of contributions because of the specific reference in § 418(e)(1)(A). The court also misconstrued the legislative history of 42 U.S.C. § 409-(i) and the definition of "employment" in 42 U.S.C. § 410(a), which, though applicable to the subchapter including § 418, does not alter the specific reference of § 418(e)(1)(A) to the definition of "employment" in I.R.C. § 3121(b). Since the contributions required of a public employer are to be "equivalent" to those imposed on private employers, the defendant's ruling on sick pay is erroneous and petitioner must be entitled to exclude its sick pay from "wages" in the same manner as private employers.

The importance of the question raised by this case must not be underestimated. If the decision below stands, there is grave doubt whether the State of New Mexico is authorized to continue to contract for Social Security coverage for its employees. It appears that all of the present contracts for coverage might be invalidated. Under § 5-7-1, et seq., N.M.S.A. 1953, the State is authorized to contract for Social Security coverage, but it is authorized by § 5-7-3(a)(2) N.M.S.A. 1953 to make contributions only with respect to "wages" and to withhold under § 5-7-4 N.M.S.A. 1953 only with respect to "wages." "Wages" are defined in § 5-7-2(a) N.M.S.A. 1953 by specific reference to the FICA provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, not to 42 U.S.C. § 409(b):

> "The term 'wages' means all remuneration for employment as defined herein, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash, except that such term shall not include that part of such remuneration which, even if it were for 'employment' within the meaning of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act would not constitute 'wages' within the meaning of that act." [Emphasis added.]

Therefore, the State is authorized to contribute and withhold only to the extent of "wages" as defined in 26 U.S.C. § 3121(a); it is prohibited from contributing on the broader basis of wages including sick pay which the Court below found applicable.

The same problem arises with respect to most other states, since the majority have the identical definition of the "wages" with respect to which the state is authorized to pay Social Security contributions. See e.g. Code of Alabama, Title 55, § 477; Arizona Revised Statutes, § 38-701; Arkansas Statutes (1947), 12-2402; Connecticut General Statutes, 7-452; 29 Delaware Code Ann. § 5701; Florida Statutes Ann. § 650.02; Georgia Code Ann. § 99-2102; 65 Purdon's Pennsylvania Statutes Ann. § 202, Revised Civil Statutes of Texas, Art. 695 g(1), 695 h(1). Therefore, the Court's holding that wages as defined in § 409 governs means that states must pay taxes on a basis prohibited by their enabling legislation.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, a writ of certiorari should issue to review the judgment and opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS,
TENTH CIRCUIT.

No. 74-1560.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO, Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

Argued May 1, 1975.

Decided June 12, 1975.

Rehearing Denied July 16, 1975.

Before LEWIS, Chief Judge, and BARRETT and DOYLE, Circuit Judges.

BARRETT, Circuit Judge.

After duly exhausting all available administrative remedies, the State of New Mexico (State) commenced this action in the district court pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 418(t) seeking a redetermination of the correctness of an assessment made by the Commissioner of Social Security, a delegate of the defendant, against the Regents of the University of New Mexico, in respect to Social Security contributions allegedly due and owing upon certain payments made by the University to an employee under its established sick leave plan. This appeal follows the Trial Court's entry of Summary Judgment in favor of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (Secretary).

The facts are not in dispute. In accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 418 and § 5-7-1 et seq., N.M.S.A., 1953 Comp., the parties entered into an agreement for coverage of employees of the State and its political subdivisions, including the University of New Mexico, under the Social Security Act. The University entered into an agreement with the Public Employees Retirement Board, effective January 1, 1955. Since 1949, the University has had in effect a "plan" or system for determining payments to its employees who are absent from work because of sickness or accident disability. The amount of payments to each employee under the plan are recorded and separately stated on the University's books and records as "sick pay" and are made from a regular salary account.

During 1968, Mr. Galloway, a University employee, was absent from work because of illness. As a non-exempt employee of several years standing, he had earned under the Plan sufficient sick leave to cover the period of his illness and the University paid him $324.97 as sick leave payments. That amount was computed under the applicable sick leave policy as his regular straight-time rate of pay times the number of hours for which he qualified for sick leave under the policy. Mr. Galloway's hours of sick leave were duly posted to the "payroll time report" and the amount paid as sick leave was reflected on the related "payroll register."

The University did not make a Social Security contribution with respect to these payments on the grounds that such payments were excluded from "wages" under 42 U.S.C. § 409(b). The Social Security Administration thereafter assessed $28.60 in respect to these payments made to Galloway.

On appeal the sole issue is whether the trial court erred in relying upon an unauthorized and improper interpretation made by the Secretary that the above payments did not qualify to be excluded from "wages" under 42 U.S.C. § 409(b).

The Social Security Act, at least insofar as it applies to private employers and their employees, is administered by the Internal Revenue Service (collecting funds from employers and employees) and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (paying benefits). Both the rate of tax to be paid, and the rate of benefit to be received are keyed to "wages" earned by the employee. The term "wages" used in this computation is defined under both the "IRS statutes" (26 U.S.C. § 3121) and under the "HEW statutes" (42 U.S.C. § 409). Both statutes provide that "wages" shall not include "payments made to an employee under a plan on account of sickness."[1]

While State employees are not covered by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act,[2] 26 U.S.C. § 3101 et seq., the States are permitted to contract with HEW to establish analogous programs under 42 U.S.C. § 418. Of importance to the instant dispute, 42 U.S.C. § 418(e)(1) provides:

> (e)(1) Each agreement under this section shall provide—
> (A) that the State will pay to the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time or times as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may by regulations prescribe, amounts equivalent to the sum of taxes which would be imposed by sections [3101 and 3111

---

[1] 26 U.S.C. § 3121(a)(2)(B) provides, inter alia:

> (a) Wages—For purposes of this chapter, the term "wages" means all remuneration for employment . . . .; except that such term shall not include—
>
> (2) the amount of any payment (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment) made to, or on behalf of, an employee or any of his dependents under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally . . . on account of—
> (B) Sickness or accident disability . . . .

42 U.S.C. § 409(b) is substantially the same.

[2] Employment by a State is excluded from the definition of "employment" by 26 U.S.C. § 3121(b)(7).

of Title 26 I.R.C. of 1954] if the services of employees covered by the agreement constituted employment as defined in section [3121 of Title 26, I.R.C., of 1954];

and

(B) that the State will comply with such regulations relating to payments and reports as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may prescribe to carry out the purposes of this section. (Emphasis added).

42 U.S.C. § 418(i) further provides:

(i) Regulations of the Secretary [HEW] to carry out the purposes of this section shall be designed to make the requirements imposed on States pursuant to this section the same so far as practicable, as those imposed on employers pursuant to this subchapter and [by Sections 3101 et seq., 6651(a) and 3504 of Title 26, I.R.C. of 1954]. (Emphasis added).

The instant controversy arises from the fact that in assessing contributions to be paid in by private employers the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has construed the "sick pay" exclusion from "Wages" differently than has the Secretary of HEW in assessing public employers.[3] [3] Rev.Rul. 65-275 (1965) simply held that payments for earned sick leave made to an employee for periods of absence from work on account of illness pursuant to a plan or system of the type described in § 3121(a)(2) of the F.I.C.A. are excluded from "wages" and are not subject to the taxes imposed under that Act.

SSR 72-56 (1972), on the other hand, held that even if there exists an established sick leave plan, payments under such a plan by a State employer would be treated as "wages" under the Social Security Act unless it is shown in addition that the State has statutory or other legal authorization to make payments to employees solely on account of sickness (as distinguished from authorization to merely continue salary payments during periods of absence due to illness.)

It is not disputed that the payment made here was made pursuant to a "plan or scheme", and hence if the interpretation issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, supra, is controlling, the HEW assessment must be reversed.

In summary, the State contends that the above interpretation made by the Social Security Administration is both irrelevant and unauthorized; that while "wages" are defined under both §§ 3121 and 409, the latter definition is relevant only for the purpose of determining entitlement to benefits under § 401; that it is made clear by 42 U.S.C. § 418(e)(1)(A) that an employer's liability for contributions (either a private or public employer) is to be determined solely under § 3121 of the I.R.C.; that the Secretary of HEW is not authorized to issue rulings under I.R.C. § 3121 and has, in fact, been directed under 42 U.S.C. § 418(i) to conform his regulations—as to the requirements to be placed on the States—to those of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and that to sustain the Secretary's interpretation would be to allow inconsistent tax policies to co-exist, discriminating between private and public employees when Congress clearly intended them to be treated equally and uniformly.

The Secretary would seem to concede that because of the reciprocal responsibilities ascribed the IRS and the HEW in the case of private employers (i.e., that the two services are working on opposite sides of the same coin in collecting taxes and paying benefits) that it would be contrary to the spirit of the Act for those agencies to have interpretations of the term "wages" which differed significantly. Amidon v. Flemming, 285 F.2d 718 (1st Cir. 1960).

Unlike the bifurcated system in respect to private employers, however, the Secretary maintains that as to public employers, HEW is the sole administrator of the Act. Hence, while payments by the State under a § 418 plan are to be made at an "equivalent" rate to the taxes imposed on private employer under § 3121 this does not necessarily mean that HEW is bound by the definition of "wages" established in the private employment sector, nor that the IRS is the only agency employed to interpret such term. HEW is the agency which assesses the States for payments due [§ 418(q)]. It is, furthermore, the agency possessing the experience and expertise in administering the statute. Its interpretation, according to the Secretary, should therefore be accorded due weight.

In further support of the contention that HEW is authorized to make the contested interpretation, the Secretary contends that: (a) the language of § 418(a) indicates that the definition of "wages" under § 409 does not exist merely for purposes of computing benefits to be paid; (b) that the legislative history of the 1958 amendment to § 409(i) indicates that Congress viewed the definitions of Sections 409 and 410 as being applicable in computing payments due under § 418(e), citing State of Montana v. United States, 489 F.2d 522 (9th Cir. 1973); and (c) that this 1958 amendment implicitly recognized the practice of HEW of including as "wages", continuation of salary during a State employee's absence from work because of sickness, citing Graves v. Gardner, 280 F.Supp. 666 (S.D. N.Y. 1968).

While we have been presented no cases directly in point with the challenge presented here, we think that under the Social Security Act the Secretary has been given the authority, albeit limited, to interpret "wages" in respect to contributions to be made by public employers. In addition to the arguments made by the Secretary in his brief, we find support for this conclusion in 42 U.S.C. § 418(i). As noted, supra, that section, entitled "Regulations" provides that any regulations made by the Secretary to "carry out the purposes" of Section 418 shall be designed to "make the requirements imposed on States . . . the same, so far as practicable, as those imposed on [private] employers

. . . ." It would seem clear from this language that where it is not "practicable", the Secretary may issue regulations as to the requirements to be placed upon the States which are not "the same" as those placed on private employers, i.e., the limitation here implies the power.

Having found the existence of authority in the Secretary, in limited situations, to make interpretations which may result in private and public employers not being treated the "same" insofar as their liability for conditions are concerned, we cannot hold, under the circumstances of this case, that the Secretary's decision that this was an instance where it was not "practicable" to conform his Regulation to those promulgated under § 3121, or to interpret wages differently for public employers, was not reasonable. Udall v. Tallman, 380 U.S. 1, 85 S.Ct. 792, 13 L.Ed.2d 616 (1965); Gardner v. Brian, 369 F.2d 443 (10th Cir. 1966).

The Secretary's "variant" interpretation was here predicated apparently upon a literal interpretation given to § 409(b), i.e., that to be excluded from "wages", sick leave payments must be paid solely on account of sickness. Such payments by a State—as opposed to a mere continuation of wages during periods of absence due to illness—would allegedly amount to an improper "donation" of State funds absent express legal authority for the State to appropriate funds for such use.[4] See, SSR 72-56, supra. Such a consideration would not be of concern in the administration by the IRS of the provisions taxing private employers; hence the need for different treatment of sick leave payments in respect to public employers, i.e., the additional requirement imposed upon the States that such authorization in fact exists.

[4] While the State categorizes HEW's concern in this regard as "absurd quibble" and an "erroneous notion", it does not specifically contend that under New Mexico law the State is empowered to make payments "solely on account of sickness." We also note that the New Mexico Attorney General's opinion dated February 15, 1971 (T.R. Vol. 1, Exhibit D), is supportive of HEW's contention. On a question of state law, courts generally give careful consideration to, and regard as highly persuasive, an opinion of the State's Attorney General where there is no other State precedent directly in point. 7 Am.Jur.2d, Attorney General § 8.

We think this constitutes a situation wherein it is not "practicable" for private and public employers to be treated "the same" under the Act as to the requirements imposed upon them.

In Gardner v. Hall, 366 F.2d 132 (10th Cir. 1966), we held:

> The Secretary has, without question, the authority and the duty to pierce any fictitious arrangements . . . when the arrangement is not in accord with reality. 366 F.2d 132 at 135.

If, by analogy, the State here has no authority to make "payments on account of sickness" such as would qualify to be excluded from "wages" under the Act, we hold that the Secretary has the authority to bar the exclusion from "wages" of such payments irregardless of how they are denominated or treated under the State's "plan".

Finally, while the State's argument for consistency of interpretation is appealing and the result desirable, such consistency has not always been found controlling where overriding considerations exist. Compare, Ludeking v. Finch, 421 F.2d 499 (8th Cir. 1970). We find F.C.C. v. American Broadcasting Co., 347 U.S. 284, 74 S.Ct. 593, 98 L.Ed. 699 (1954) to be inapposite. Our holding is consistent with the Congressional policy underlying Federal Social Security legislation which requires courts to interpret the Act liberally, and to resolve any doubts in favor of coverage. Rasmussen v. Gardner, 374 F.2d 589 (10th Cir. 1967); Dvorak v. Celebrezze, 345 F.2d 894 (10th Cir. 1965).

In addition to other taxes, there is hereby imposed on the income of every individual a tax equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 3121(a)) received by him with respect to employment (as defined in section 3121(b))—

(1) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1968, the rate shall be 3.8 percent;

(2) with respect to wages received during the calendar years 1969 and 1970, the rate shall be 4.2 percent;

(3) with respect to wages received during the calendar years 1971 and 1972, the rate shall be 4.6 percent; and

(4) with respect to wages received after December 31, 1972, the rate shall be 5.0 percent.

SUBCHAPTER B.—TAX ON EMPLOYERS

Sec. 3111. Rate of tax.

(a) Old-age, survivors, and disability insurance.

In addition to other taxes, there is hereby imposed on every employer an excise tax, with respect to having individuals in his employ, equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 3121(a)) paid by him with respect to employment (as defined in section 3121 (b))—

(1) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1968, the rate shall be 3.8 percent;

(2) with respect to wages paid during the calendar years 1969 and 1970, the rate shall be 4.2 percent;

(3) with respect to wages paid during the calendar years 1971 and 1972, the rate shall be 4.6 percent; and

(4) with respect to wages paid after December 31, 1972, the rate shall be 5.0 percent.

SUBCHAPTER C.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Sec. 3121. Definitions.

(a) Wages.

For purposes of this chapter, the term "wages" means all remuneration for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash; except that such term shall not include—

(2) the amount of any payment (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment) made to, or on behalf of, an employee or any of his dependents under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally (or for his employees generally and their dependents) or for a class or classes of his employees (or for a class or classes of his employees and their dependents), on account of—

(A) retirement, or

(B) sickness or accident disability, or

(C) medical or hospitalization expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, or

(d) death;

(b) Employment.

For purposes of this chapter, the term "employment" means any service performed after 1936 and prior to 1955 which was employment for purposes of subchapter A of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1939 under the law applicable to the period in which such service was performed . . . except that, in the case of service performed after 1954, such term shall not include—

(7) service performed in the employ of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, except that this paragraph shall not apply in the case of—

B. Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C.

Sec. 409. Definition of wages.

For the purposes of this subchapter, the term "wages" means remuneration paid prior to 1951 which was wages for the purposes of this subchapter under the law applicable to the payment of such remuneration, and remuneration paid after 1950 for employment, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash; except that, in the case of remuneration paid after 1950, such term shall not include—

(b) The amount of any payment (including any amount paid by an employer for insurance or annuities, or into a fund, to provide for any such payment) made to, or on behalf of, an employee or any of his dependents under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally (or for his employees generally and their dependents) or for a class or classes of his employees (or for a class or classes of his employees and their dependents), on account of (1) retirement, or (2) sickness or accident disability, or (3) medical or hospitalization expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, or (4) death;

Sec. 410. Definitions relating to employment.

For the purposes of this subchapter—

(a) The term "employment" means any service performed after 1936 and prior to 1951 which was employment for the purposes of this subchapter under the law applicable to the period in which such service was performed . . . except that, in the case of service performed after 1950, such term shall not include—

(7) Service performed in the employ of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby, except that this paragraph shall not apply in the case of—

(A) service included under an agreement under section 418 of this title,

Sec. 418. Voluntary agreements for coverage of State and local employees—Purpose of agreement

(a)(1) The Secretary shall, at the request of any State, enter into an agreement with such State for the purpose of extending the insurance system established by this subchapter to services performed by individuals as employees of such State or any political subdivision thereof. Each such agreement shall contain such provisions, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, as the State may request.

(2) Notwithstanding section 410(a) of this title, for the purposes of this subchapter the term "employment" includes any service included under an agreement entered into under this section.

(e)(1) Each agreement under this section shall provide—

(A) that the State will pay to the Secretary of the Treasury, at such time or times as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may by regulations prescribe, amounts equivalent to the sum of the taxes which would be imposed by sections 1400 and 1410 of Title 26, Internal Revenue Code of 1939 [sections 3101 and 3111 of Internal Revenue Code], if the services of employees covered by the agreement constituted employment as defined in section 1426 of Title 26, Internal Revenue Code of 1939 [section 3121 of Internal Revenue Code]; and

(B) that the State will comply with such regulations relating to payments and reports as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may prescribe to carry out the purposes of this section.

(i) Regulations of the Secretary to carry out the purposes of this section shall be designed to make the requirements imposed on States pursuant to this section the same, so far as practicable, as those imposed on employers pursuant to this subchapter and subchapter A [chapter 21, Internal Revenue Code] or E of chapter 9 of Title 26, Internal Revenue Code of 1939.

C. New Mexico Statutes.

Sec. 5-7-2. Definitions.—For the purposes of sections 5-7-1 through 5-7-9 N.M.S.A. 1953:

(a) the term "wages" means all remuneration for employment as defined herein, including the cash value of all remuneration paid in any medium other than cash, except that such term shall not include that part of such remuneration which, even if it were for "employment" within the meaning of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act would not constitute "wages" within the meaning of that act;

Sec. 5-7-3. Federal-state agreement.—(a) The state agency, with the approval of the governor, is hereby authorized to enter on behalf of the state into an agreement with the secretary of health, education and welfare, consistent with the terms and provisions of this act [5-7-1 to 5-7-9], for the purpose of extending the benefits of the federal old-age and survivors' insurance system to employees of the state or any political subdivision thereof with respect to services specified in such agreement which constitute "employment" as defined in section 2 of this act [5-7-2]. Such agreement may contain such provisions relating to coverage, benefits, contributions, effective date, modification and termination of the agreement, administration and other appropriate provisions as the state agency and secretary of health, education and welfare shall agree upon, but, except as may be otherwise required by or under the Social Security Act as to the services to be covered, such agreement shall provide in effect that:

(1) benefits will be provided for employees whose services are covered by the agreement (and their dependents and survivors) on the same basis as though such services constituted employment within the meaning of Title II of the Social Security Act;

(2) the state will pay to the secretary of the treasury, at such time or times as may be prescribed under the Social Security Act, contributions with respect to wages (as defined in section 2 of this act [5-7-2], equal to the sum of the taxes which would be imposed by the Federal Insurance Contributions Act if the services covered by the agreement constituted employment within the meaning of that act;

OCTOBER TERM, 1975

No. 75-557

STATE OF NEW MEXICO, PETITIONER

v.

F. DAVID MATHEWS, SECRETARY OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE TENTH CIRCUIT

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

Petitioner contends that the Social Security Administration erred in assessing contributions to be made by a public employer pursuant to an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare under 42 U.S.C. 418(a)(1).

States and political subdivisions such as the University of New Mexico and their employees are not automatically covered by the Social Security Act, 49 Stat. 620, as amended, 42 U.S.C. 301 et seq., and, as a corollary, are not subject to the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (FICA), as amended, 26 U.S.C. 3101 et seq. They may, however, enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to extend Social Security coverage to their employees, and to make contributions to the United States in lieu of FICA taxes. 42 U.S.C. 418. Since 1955, employees of the University of New Mexico have been covered by such a "Section 418" agreement (Pet. App. 1a-2a).

In 1968, pursuant to its general plan for determining payments to be made to employees during their absence from work because of sickness, the University paid an employee, L. H. Galloway, his regular straight-time rate of pay during such an absence. Payments were made from a regular salary account rather than from a special sick leave account. State law did not authorize the University to make payments to employees solely on account of sickness (Pet. App. 2a).

The University did not make a contribution with respect to the payments to Galloway. The Commissioner of Social Security determined that a contribution should have been made, and he assessed a deficiency of $28.60 (Pet. App. 2a). After exhausting its administrative remedies, petitioner brought this action in the United States District Court for the District of New Mexico, contesting the Commissioner's determination. The district court granted the Secretary's motion for summary judgment, and the court of appeals affirmed (Pet. App. 1a-8a).

1. A public employer who enters into an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 418 must pay to the federal government "amounts equivalent to the sum of the taxes which would be imposed * * * if the services of employees covered by the agreement constituted employment [for FICA purposes] * * *." 42 U.S.C. 418(e)(1)(A). The FICA taxes arising from "employment" are imposed upon "wages." 26 U.S.C. 3101 and 3111. For FICA purposes, "wages" is defined so as to exclude "the amount of any payment * * * made to, or on behalf of, an employee or any of his dependents under a plan or system established by an employer which makes provision for his employees generally * * *, on account of * * * (B) sickness or accident disability * * *." 26 U.S.C. 3121(a)(2).

Thus the University's payments to Galloway were "wages" subject to contribution unless they were made "on account of * * * sickness." The Commissioner, following established practice (see S.S.R. 72-56), determined that since New Mexico law does not authorize payments to be made to state employees or to employees of state institutions, such as the University, solely "on account of * * * sickness," the payments to Galloway could not be deemed to be such payments. If, on the other hand, the payments to Galloway had been made not from the regular salary accounts but from a segregated sick leave account, pursuant to statutory authorization to make payments "on account of * * * sickness," those payments would not have been treated as "wages" and no corresponding contribution would have been required (ibid.).

2. Petitioner contests this result on the ground that salary continuation payments made by a private employer pursuant to a sick leave plan are excluded from "wages" for purposes of computing FICA taxes. See Rev. Rul. 65-275, 1965-2 Cum. Bull. 385. Petitioner challenges the Secretary's authority to promulgate regulations providing for different treatment of public employees. But the statute requires a State entering into a Section 418 agreement to "comply with such regulations relating to payments * * * as the Secretary * * * may prescribe * * *." 42 U.S.C. 418(e)(1)(B). In turn, the Secretary is empowered to promulgate regulations that will impose upon public employers "the same [obligations], so far as practicable, as those imposed on [private] employers * * *." 42 U.S.C. 418(i) (emphasis added). The court of appeals correctly sustained the Secretary's determination that it was not practicable to treat public employers' salary continuation payments in the same manner as those made by private employers.

The circumstances of a private employer differ from those of the public employer in that the former may make donations to employees during periods of absence without restriction, whereas payments made by the latter are governed by statutes that frequently bar donations as such.

If the governing statute does not authorize payments solely "on account of * * * sickness," but instead simply permits absence on account of sickness to be excused, the public employer lacks authority to make non-wage contributions. As the court of appeals correctly observed (Pet. App. 7a-8a):

> Such a consideration would not be of concern in the administration by the IRS of the provisions taxing private employers; hence the need for different treatment of sick leave payments in respect to public employers, i.e., the additional requirement imposed upon the States that such authorization in fact exists.

Where the public employer lacks authority to make non-wage contributions, salary continuation payments are properly considered "wages" for purposes of the determination of liability under a Section 418 agreement. This is the longstanding administrative construction of the States' obligations under such agreements and as such it is, of course, entitled to great weight. Udall v. Tallman, 380 U.S. 1. This construction conforms to the congressional intent that doubts be resolved in favor of coverage. S. Rep. No. 1669, 81st Cong., 2d Sess., p. 2 (1950). Moreover, petitioner's own Attorney General has concluded that petitioner and its instrumentalities have no authority to make non-wage contributions and that salary continuation payments must be treated as wages for Social Security purposes. Op. Atty Gen. N. Mex., No. 71-21 (February 15, 1971).

3. Finally, contrary to petitioner's contention (Pet. 7-8), the decision below casts no doubt on petitioner's authority to continue its Section 418 agreements. The validity of those agreements has not been questioned. Furthermore, petitioner's legislature could empower petitioner to make non-wage contributions "on account of * * * sickness," and such payments would not give rise to liability under petitioner's Section 418 agreements.

The decision below is not in conflict with that of any other court of appeals and does not warrant review. It is therefore respectfully submitted that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.
